

Bryan Doyle, the bass player, was born and raised near Liverpool, England. Bryan first began to play music at the age of eleven as a drummer. He played drums with various bands until he was seventeen, when he took up folk guitar. On guitar, Bryan developed a finger picking style influenced by such artists as Bert Jansch, John Renbourn and Big Bill Broonzy. At the age of eighteen, he decided to combine his taste for travelling and playing music and went to Amsterdam where he found work as a solo artist in local clubs. Then he spent some time in Athens playing with a Greek Rock 'n Roll band. After this he travelled to Kathmandu where he listened to Indian music. Later on his travels brought him to Spain where he was introduced to Country music when he started playing bass with an American singer and guitar player. Finally, he met Jim and Les performing in West Germany and decided to come to Berlin to join ROAD RUNNER. Bryan's innate sense of humour and theatrics makes him the focal point of the ROAD RUNNER show.

